EDUCATION AND TRAINING:

Dr. Chan's journey in medicine began at the Yong Loo Lin School of Medicine, National University of Singapore, where she laid the foundation for her training as a cardiologist. She went on to refine her expertise during her junior and senior residencies at the National University Hospital, gaining invaluable clinical experience.

Notably, Dr Chan was awarded the prestigious Singapore Ministry of Health Healthcare Manpower Development Program (MOH HMDP) in 2020. She opted to further her training at the National University Heart Centre, and simultaneously developed the Heart Failure Service at its Jurong Health Campus.

Dr. Chan's dedication and commitment to her field were recognised when she received her testamur from The National Board of Echocardiography (America) in 2023.
